New Mexico Transfer-Ready Certificate

Students considering transfer to another New Mexico public university may benefit from completion of the Transfer-Ready Certificate.

- The program is based on common general education core curriculum developed by the New Mexico Higher Education Department to facilitate transfer of lower division credits between colleges and universities within the state.

- These credits may be applied to lower division general education requirements at any New Mexico public higher education institution. While WNMU is regionally accredited, with additional accreditations in specific disciplines, acceptance of transfer credit by other institutions is subject to their policies.

- Students are advised to work closely with an academic advisor, especially in the selection of the guided electives. If additional courses beyond the required 30 credits are taken, only those listed in the certificate curriculum are assured to transfer.

- Completion of the certificate does not prohibit continuation at WNMU for additional credits or a degree, not does it impact eligibility for financial aid.

The following requirements must be met to qualify for the certificate:

- A minimum of 30 credit hours

- All course work must be completed with a minimum grade of “C” in each class

- The student must have a minimum GPA of 2.0 upon completion

- The student must meet all other university requirements
